YORKVILLE
UNIVERSITY

Graduate Certificate in Education (GCE): Teaching and Learning

“We offer students the opportunity to pursue higher education, determine their purpose in life, and make an impact on the world.”

Dr. Julia Christensen Hughes
President, Yorkville University

A practical approach to Teaching and Learning

The GCE: Teaching and Learning helps skilled professionals become critically reflective educators who are prepared to enhance the adult learning experience in individual or group settings.

Designed for educators with advanced skills or trade backgrounds, the program provides practical approaches to program development, pedagogical strategy, and assessment and evaluation.

Graduates of the GCE: Teaching and Learning are efficient, effective, and engaging educators, well-versed in areas such as teaching styles, creating motivating learning environments, ethical concerns in teaching adults, and the use of technologies for teaching.

Start dates: January, May, September

Tuition: $11,700

Delivery: Online

Duration: As few as 10.5 months*

*With full course load, year-round study and/or approved transfer credits.

Career Outcomes

The GCE: Teaching and Learning develops the general pedagogical and functional aspects of a new instructor, opening opportunities for you in areas such as:

- Community and trades colleges
- Polytechnics
- LINC settings
- Community Education
- Just-in-time training in public, private, and not for profit
- Healthcare
- Training and Development Officers (TDO) in the Canadian Armed Forces
- Learning and Development staff in public, private, and not for profit
- Human Resource Professionals

“The [Contexts of Adult Learning] course helped me explore the multitude of ways in which we learn, and address the social, political and technical aspects of learning to better support adult learners.”

Lorie Wright

Master of Education

Lorie Wright took the Contexts of Adult Learning course as part of her M.Ed.
